Concept of functional neuroteratology and the importance ...

This chapter focuses on the concept of functional neuroteratology and the importance of neurochemistry. The concept that more subtle behavioral or functional defects might be because of chemicals during pregnancy was put forward for the first time by Werboff and Gottlieb, who introduced the term behavioral teratology in scientific literature. Functional neuroteratology is, consequently quite a new concept in neurosciences. It is the existence of behavioral or other functional defects owing
